A black and white photograph of an archaeological site. The ground is covered with numerous light-colored, irregularly shaped stones and pebbles of various sizes. A central area of the ground is relatively clear of stones, showing a textured, sandy surface. A white rectangular label with the number '229' is placed in the center of this clear area. Below the label, a horizontal scale bar is visible, consisting of a white segment followed by a black segment. The overall scene suggests an excavation or a study of a natural stone-strewn area.

A black and white photograph of an archaeological site. The ground is covered with numerous stones of various sizes and shapes, some of which appear to be part of a larger structure or foundation. Two white labels with black text are placed on the ground: '204' is located in the upper right quadrant, and '229' is located in the center. A small, dark, rectangular object, possibly a scale or a marker, is positioned horizontally between the two labels. The overall scene suggests an excavation or a study of ancient stone structures.
